

Socionext to Highlight Advanced Technologies at Annual Linley Data Center Conference Feb. 9-10

Company's High Performance SoC Technology and Robust Design Protocols to be Featured on Feb. 10 in Session Five

SUNNYVALE, Calif. Jan. 26, 2016, --- Socionext Inc., a leader in state-of-the art system on chip technology, will feature its very large scale, high performance SoC designs for data center systems during a comprehensive presentation at the annual Linley Group Data Center Conference scheduled for Feb. 9-10 at the Hyatt Regency Santa Clara.

"Socionext is an innovative fabless semiconductor company offering advanced 16nm networking and server designs for long haul, metro, and data center applications," said Loring Wirbel, Linley Group's senior analyst. "In addition to its 56Gbps SerDes cores, Socionext provides differentiated ASIC offerings based on high-speed A/D and D/A converters, basic DMT modulation technologies and high-end packaging technology."

During Session 5 on day two at 11:25 AM, "High Performance SoC Solutions for the Data Center" will be presented by Nobuaki Nonaka, manager of Socionext's High Performance SoC Business Unit. The discussion will review Socionext's advanced technologies, robust design technology and IP portfolio, and how they help develop differentiated products and reduce development time. Nonaka will focus on leading edge SerDes and building blocks designed to expedite ASIC development in 20nm, 16nm, and finer technology. The day 2 session, moderated by Wirbel, will explore cutting-edge IC technologies and IP cores that focus on high efficiency.

Nonaka has worked on physical design methodology and CAD area at Panasonic from 1990 to 2000. He later transitioned to high performance SoC physical design at Fujitsu from 2000 to 2014. He is currently developing 16nm physical design methodology for high performance SoC.
